Campaign supporters gear up for today's election

By Marla R. Van Schuyver
Staff Writer

Volunteers lined the streets and party headquarters buzzed with anticipation Monday in preparation for today's elections.

Ross Perot supporters stood along downtown streets of San Luis Obispo Monday afternoon waving signs and soliciting honks from fellow Perot supporters.

Perot supporter Ron Skow said he is "amazed" at the response from passersby.

"If the number of people honking translates in any way to the number of people who really are going to vote for him, he's going to carry this county," Skow said.

"When we first started coming out here with the signs, we were only getting about 40 to 50 percent of the people honking, but I would (guess) at least 60 percent are now honking, nodding or waving to show their support for Perot."

Democratic headquarters was in a frenzy Monday with volunteers running about, phones ringing and signs being made. Local Democrats also gathered at 2 p.m. Monday for a rally with Senate candidates Dianne Feinstein and Barbara Boxer and Congressional candidate Gloria Ochoa.

"It's really hectic, but we're ready," said Alec Kohut, campaign chairman for the John Ashbaugh for Congress campaign. "There is an excellent atmosphere among the Democrats that we haven't seen in decades. It's an exciting time for us."

All party headquarters emphasized the efforts they have planned today to get voters to the precincts.

"We have phone banks set up all over the county, with more than 100 lines," said Mike Whiteford, chairman of the San Luis Obispo Republican Committee. "We are going to be watching the precincts and if one of them seems to be lagging in turnout, then we'll be calling people in that precinct."

Perot supporters both on-campus and in San Luis are planning to be out in public view today.

"We're going to be out on the streets, waving our signs and reminding people to vote," said Joyce Jensen, a volunteer in Perot's headquarters. "We've also been on the phone calling people, like Ross asked us to."

Monday brought many unsure voters to the Perot table in the University Union Monday and more are expected today, according to Corey Daniel, Cal Poly representative to the Perot campaign.

"We've had some T-shirt sales and a lot of people asking for buttons to wear in support of him," Daniel said. "We've had a lot of people who said they like

Congressional hopefuls rally

The Plumbers & Steam Fitters Local 403 was charged with electricity Monday afternoon as Dianne Feinstein, Barbara Boxer and Gloria Ochoa rallied for voter support.

State Assembly candidate John Ashbaugh introduced the women amidst enthusiastic cheers of "one more day!"

"It's time to send George Bush, Michael Huffington and the rest of the liars masquerading as politicians back home and out of Washington," Ashbaugh said. "Now we've got the chance to send a team of Democrats working together to Sacramento and Washington."

All three candidates stressed they would work with each other to change America's economy and quality of life.

"We need change on all rungs of the political ladder," said Ochoa, Democratic congressional candidate for the 22nd district. "We don't just want to win by a (small) margin, either. We want to win by a landslide."

Boxer, a Democratic candidate for the Senate, promised commitment and teamwork.

"We're going to make a change in the country," Boxer said.

"I see a lot of young, enthusiastic people out here, and I want you to know we're going to work hard so you don't have to make a choice between paying rent or tuition."

Boxer also stated her support for keeping the Central Coast free of offshore oil drilling.

"Are you ready to make California history tomorrow?" Feinstein asked the sign-waving crowd. "We have the chance to double the number of women in Congress."

"This is not an issue of gender, but an issue of agenda," she added.

The Democratic candidate for Senate also discussed family values.

"The number one family value in San Luis Obispo is a job," Feinstein said. "We're going to fight like tigers against trade agreements which take jobs away from Americans who need them."

Feinstein also described a two-point plan to support abortion rights.

"We need to elect leaders who won't confirm court justices who don't believe in a woman's privacy," Feinstein said. "And we need to see Roe vs. Wade put into law."

Magic Johnson says he's out of basketball for good

Associated Press Reports

Magic Johnson, who returned to the Los Angeles Lakers on Sept. 29 after missing last season with the AIDS virus, said Monday he was retiring after all.

Johnson made his decision just four days before the beginning of the NBA's 1992-93 season.

"After much thought and talking it over with Cookie and my family, I decided I will retire — for good — from the Lakers," Johnson said in a statement issued by the team.

"It has become obvious that the various controversies surrounding my return are taking away from both basketball as a sport and the larger issue of living with HIV for me and the many people affected."

Johnson played in five of the Lakers' eight preseason games, averaging 10.4 points and nearly 12 assists a game.

"I've come to realize that it simply isn't possible to return to playing in the NBA and still continue to be involved in all the things I want to do," Johnson's statement said.

"Although my family has given me their support to return to the Lakers, I feel that it is more important to spend my time with them as well as continuing with HIV and AIDS education projects than in the competitive and time-consuming world of the NBA," he said.

It was only Friday night, after the Laker's final exhibition game, that Johnson had said he and the team were ready for the upcoming season.

Johnson, the NBA's career leader in assists with 9,921, shocked the sports world last Nov. 7 when he suddenly announced his retirement. He said he was quitting because he recently had tested HIV positive.

Johnson's health played no

Bush still denies arms-for-hostages knowledge

President Bush brandished pages from a 1987 congressional report on the Iran-Contra scandal, saying it confirms what he's always said about his role in the affair.

There's only one problem: Four years after that report was written, investigators found new evidence that suggests Bush knew about the arms-for-hostages deal all along.

The evidence — the notes of former Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger — shows that in a Jan. 7, 1986, National Security Council meeting, Bush favored swapping 4,000 TOW antitank missiles for five American hostages. That's according to a new indictment of Weinberger handed up Friday.

Iran-Contra prosecutors found Weinberger's notes last year.

Here's what it says about the Jan. 7, 1986, meeting:

—Congress could find no record that the vice president expressed any views on

"President Bush owes the American people a forthright apology."

— Edmund Muskie

the proposed delivery of the 4,000 TOWs.

—President Reagan and his top aides discussed "hostages as one of the motivating factors" for selling arms to Iran.

Bush and others from the Reagan administration have always emphasized that the main reason for the arms sales was to bring about a more moderate government in Iran.

"I have said over and over again that the original proposal was not presented as an arms-for-hostages swap," Bush said in 1988. He repeated that over the weekend, insisting that "the whole thing was to encourage moderates. And yes, if the hostages came out, fine."

But Weinberger's note states: "President decided to go with Israeli-Iranian offer to release our 5 hostages in return for sale of 4000 TOWs to Iran. ... Bill Casey, Ed Meese — VP favored — as did Poindexter."

Bush cast doubt on the accuracy of Weinberger's note, saying Reagan to this day doesn't regard the Iran initiative as dealing arms for hostages.

Bush says that "in retrospect, I'd have to say" it "probably was" arms for hostages, but insists that he didn't recognize that on Jan. 7, 1986.

Reagan twice has changed his position on whether he engaged in arms-for-hostages deals with Iran. On Nov. 13, 1986, he told a national television audience that "we did not — repeat — did not trade weapons or anything else for hostages, nor will we."

Reagan recanted four months later after the report of the president's Tower Board concluded the opposite. But he reverted to his original denial of an arms-for-hostages scheme in the 1990 trial of his former national security adviser, John Poindexter.

One Tower Board member, Edmund Muskie, said Bush's "repeated claims of ignorance about the arms-for-hostages deal now conflict directly" with the newly revealed Weinberger notes.

"President Bush owes the American people a forthright explanation," Muskie said Saturday night.

But another Tower Board member — Bush's national security adviser, Brent Scowcroft — criticized Iran-Contra prosecutor Lawrence Walsh as "political" for bringing the Weinberger indictment just four days before the election.

The former defense secretary is charged with five counts of lying to Congress and Iran-Contra prosecutors.

NEWS BRIEFS

UC Berkeley crime calls double

University of California police say have boosted security around the campus because of an increasing number of calls for assistance.

UC police said they have added more foot patrols since Oct. 21, when 20-year-old John Mastney, an undergraduate, was killed in downtown Berkeley.

Police are also still trying to solve the February murder of Grace Rualo Asuncion. She was found stabbed to death in a fifth-floor campus office.

Lt. Pat Carroll said calls for personal security have doubled since the killings.

South Africa considers joint rule

The African National Congress is considering a plan to govern South Africa jointly with President F.W. de Klerk's National Party, an ANC official said Sunday.

The disclosure came a day after ANC leader Nelson Mandela announced the organization would meet with government leaders on Nov. 22 for further talks on ending white minority rule.

Stoffel van der Merwe, national chairman of the governing National Party, confirmed a meeting was scheduled but said the date was not set.

Clinton maintains lead in polls

Bill Clinton gained slightly in the polls over the weekend, leading President Bush by eight points in the survey that had shown a dead heat last week.

Gallup's daily tracking poll for CNN and USA Today had Clinton at 44 percent, Bush at 36 percent and Ross Perot at 14 percent among 1,562 likely voters interviewed Saturday and Sunday with a 3 percent margin of error.

Clinton was up by seven points in Gallup's polls of 1,579 likely voters on Friday and Saturday, with 43 percent. Bush had 36 percent, Perot 15 percent.

Clinton led by six points in a Harris Poll taken Friday night through Sunday night. The poll of 1,975 likely voters showed Clinton with 43 percent, Bush with 37 percent, Perot with 16 percent and 1 percent for others.

A report in the Sunday Times newspaper said a draft document on the power-sharing plan was distributed last week at a meeting of the ANC, the nation's leading black group, and its allies.

ANC spokesperson Gill Marcus called the document a discussion paper with "no standing whatsoever" in the organization. But she said it probably would be distributed to allied groups and regional organizations for study.

Dead guitarist 'looking healthy'

Elvis is dead. Jerry Garcia is not.

On Halloween, a lively and slimmed-down Garcia laid to rest greatly exaggerated reports of his demise when he gave his first performance since he fell ill in August, sparking fast-moving rumors among his fans that he was dead.

"He's a lean, mean guitar-pickin' machine," said Grier McCurdy, 27, who staked out a front row spot for The Jerry Garcia Band's sold-out show at the Oakland Coliseum Saturday night.

The portly, 50-year-old rock star has been adhering to a strict nutrition and exercise program since his bout with exhaustion and other health problems forced the Grateful Dead to cancel a fall tour.

The Grateful Dead is the most popular concert act in the United States. It earned $30 million in concert ticket sales last year.

Garcia has a history of health problems that have caused breaks in the Dead's grueling concert schedules. In 1986, he entered the hospital in a diabetic coma. He also has admitted past drug use.

MEChA unites in statewide cultural conference

By Cynthia Nelson
Staff Writer

Group discusses its heritage, obstacles in Chumash

Chicano students met at Cal Poly over the weekend to participate in a statewide conference hosted by the campus chapter of Movimiento Estudiantil Chicano de Aztlán.

The conference was held to educate Chicano students on their heritage and to discuss some of the problems they face.

"It is beautiful to see so many brown faces at Cal Poly," said Armando Pezo Silva of Student Academic Services.

"Today, we make history," he said to the crowd of 700 Chicano college and high school students in Chumash Auditorium.

Pezo introduced Daniel Osuna of the Partido De La Raza from Arizona.

Osuna called on students to put off differences and to unify, in order to better their circumstances.

"Become the best analytical thinkers you can so your adversaries will be reacting to you, and you will be calling the shots, not them," he said.

"We can achieve anything we want to as a people," Osuna added. "It only takes you to believe in yourself as an individual."

To motivate students, Osuna displayed slides depicting the horror the indigenous people suffered when Christopher Columbus and the Spanish Conquistadores arrived.

Osuna told stories of massacres hangings, mutilations and wide spread disease among his ancestors.

"You cannot lie to a people about their history and not expect them to react, even violently when they find out the truth," Osuna said.

He reminded the students not to be angry at the European descendants for what their ancestors did, but to work to remove the 500 years of oppression.

Students then attended seminars pertinent to rebuilding the foundation of the Chicano people.

Seminar subjects included date rape, AIDS, alcoholism, homophobia, Chicano history and how to organize on campus.

Nearly 75 students filed into a classroom led by Carlos Montez of Cal State University Dominguez Hills, who challenged students to organize.

To start, Montez said they must stop talking among themselves, make a plan, involve others and set out to accomplish the goal.

"The key to organizing is doing one issue at a time," he said.

Once a group is organized and completes their tasks successfully, they gain power, he added.

A second series of workshops continued into the afternoon.

They focused on the Los Angeles riots, indigenous thought and culture, the free trade agreement, the history of the Chicano student movement and a law suit involving Chicanos in Santa Maria.

Former Cal Poly lecturer Jorge Aguiñiga, and Joe Tologan of the Committee for the Betterment of the Santa Maria Valley discussed the current political atmosphere in Santa Maria.

The two described a lawsuit currently being brought against the city by members of the Mexican-American community, who were outraged by a controversial statement made by Mayor George Hobbs in 1990.

The plaintiffs are asking that Santa Maria be divided into seven districts, with each electing its own representative to the City Council.

Tologan said, should the case be won, it will set a precedent for state politics.

"If you sit around and wait for someone to speak out, it's not going to happen," Tologan said.

Tologan added the suit could have dramatic impact on state politics, as 80 percent of the cities in California are estimated to have the same problem of underrepresentation.

The weekend of events was a success, according to Pedro Arroyo and Fernando de Alba, MEChA's president and second vice president at Cal Poly.

Arroyo said the conference served as an example that Chicano students can come together.

"It reinforces everything we stand for, everything we have been fighting for in the last 20 years," Arroyo said. "Events like this give us hope, direction and strength."

COMMENTARY

Election incentives By Bryan Bailey

Unless you have been living under a rock for the last six months, you have been inundated by now with more than enough "get out and vote" propaganda. You are primed to exercise that most treasured of Constitutional privileges, the right to choose who will represent you as the political figurehead of the United States.

However, due to the curious anomalies of international date and time zones, a large group of eligible voters will not even consider casting ballots. Once again, as the polls close at 8 p.m. Eastern Time, the mass media (television networks in particular) will begin to broadcast projected winners based on completed returns on the East Coast.

This practice is paramount to insider trading on the stock market. Not only does it promote apathetic voter response on the West Coast, but it also leaves an easy excuse for those with a "go with a winner" mentality. Those too lazy or pressed for time will vote with the majority rather than educate themselves to the options available. A vote cast in ignorance is more dangerous than no vote at all.

It's not too late to educate yourself, at least to the point where you can "eliminate" candidates and vote for the "lesser of all evils." Study the ballot sent to you by mail; the arguments for all the initiatives, as well as contacts for more information, are there.

As for motivation to vote, I can give you five reasons to vote right off the bat:

1. Mayor

As controversial a race as San Luis Obispo has ever seen is shaping up, and your life will be directly affected by the outcome. The candidates running are:

Jerry Reiss Peg Pinard
Cal Massey Penny Rappa

2. City Council

Both wisened experience and youthful exuberance are going head-to-head in this campaign for the first time since 1973, the last time a student ran for a council seat (he won, by the way). This election also touches city residents' lives directly.

3. County Officials

While further removed from direct contact with residents than City Council or mayoral races, these elections could prove crucial for a swing-vote in key issues regarding the city (can we say, "state water" or "school board crisis"?).

4. State Representatives

This is your direct line of communication to the President (whoever he turns out to be). Miss out on voting for this one and you may as well move to the Sahara and put your head in the sand. You'll have to fight through the mudslinging, but you can still make an educated choice.

5. State Propositions

These are biggies. Everything from more money for schools to the "Right to Die" initiative is here. If you don't vote on these, someone else is going to do it for you. It's kind of like having your mother pick out your clothes.

Vote today. You only get one chance.

Taking back the airwaves

By Peter Hartlaub

"Baby I got my facts learned real good right now. Poor man wanna be rich. Rich man wanna be king. And the king ain't satisfied till he rules everything."
— Bruce Springsteen

When I was young, life was beautiful.

I had The Muppet Show on channel 4, CHiP's on channel 5 and Ultraman on channel 2 and I thought to myself, damn! what a wonderful country this is where a guy can just plug his TV in the wall and watch what he wants. It was my first lesson in freedom.

When I was a lad, it was simple. No boxes. No high fees. No monopolistic tyrants. Just a power outlet and a television and the world was yours.

Now I get one channel — KSBY — which is fine if you can be fulfilled by a night of Rick Martel, Alex Trebek and that obnoxious-voiced harpy who plays Whitley on A Different World.

There is a name for my pain and it is Sonic Cable.

I think a lot about Sonic. It consumes me that in a world where even oil companies seem to care such an evil can exist. At least Exxon apologizes when they screw over a whole population. So I sat down the other night and made this list.

Top twelve really, really bad deals of this century:

1. A cheeseburger bought in the Honolulu International Airport.
2. Season tickets to the 1991 Los Angeles Rams games.
3. The Atari 2600 "Video Olympics" cartridge.
4. Sonic Cable rates in 1992.
5. Movie popcorn.
6. The 1991 Buster Douglas/Evander Holyfield pay-per-view.
7. The "Slinky."
8. A two-year membership to 24-Hour Gym in San Luis Obispo purchased last June.
9. Season tickets to the 1990 Rams games.
10. 1992 Olympic Triplecast/Season tickets to the 1991 Lakers games (tie).
11. Beef jerky sold in gas stations.

12. 35mm film bought at Disneyland.

An interesting note; while Sonic Cable is now ranked number four in the really, really bad deals this century, two of the other top twelve picks could be purchased on Sonic Cable.

But enough with lists, let's get down to figures.

Sonic Cable rates are now $23.75 per month (not to mention a plethora of obtuse fees) and according to Sonic Cable manager Steve Burrell in an Oct. 7 Mustang Daily article that with recent cable regulations coming from the federal government, they will soon go up $2 to $6 per month. That's a possible $29.75 a month for 29 channels. You now pay 81 cents per channel and could soon pay more than a dollar.

Yes, there is no question that you are being ripped off but to what extreme?

To look at the magnitude with which we are being shafted, we should have some sort of basis of comparison.

I looked at a recent listing of the cities in California with the highest average citizen income and called the cable companies that service them. The results were interesting:

Viacom Cable, which serves Marin, charges $20.60 for 28 channels. That's 73 cents per channel.

Pacific Cable, which serves Hillsborough, charges $24.50 for 43 channels. That's 57 cents per channel.

And the cable company that serves Beverly Hills says it can give me 40 channels for $21.95. That's 55 cents per channel.

Yes, it's true. Luke, Dylan and Brenda are paying less for cable than you are.

I've hypothesized that the rules at Sonic for rate increases are really quite simple. Anything can be an excuse. If Congress doesn't regulate cable — your rates go up. If it does regulate it — your rates go up. If there's a new moon — your rates go up. If Taco Bell introduces a new formula for their nacho sauce — your rates go up.

So what's the solution?

As far as I'm concerned, two good things have come out of Los Angeles in the last century — Jim Morrison and the proper way to deal with soaring cable rates.

Now don't get me wrong. I'm not specifically instructing you to bribe your local Sonic Cable repairman. I'm not telling you to get a neighbor to pretend their cable isn't working and when the guy comes to connect the aerial slip him a hundred to do some "unscheduled" work. And I'm definitely not telling you to go to Radio Shack and get a hybrid splitter combiner (item #15-1141 in the fall 1992 catalog), make an incision in your neighbor's cable wire and hook it up yourself.

That would be illegal.

But it would be illegal in a beautiful, patriotic Boston Tea Party kind of way. Everyone wins. You get cable at a relatively cheap one-time rate and some poor working guy gets to buy his kids the Reebok Pump sneakers they've been wanting for Christmas.

My household took the cowardly way out. Presently I am a martyr who suffers without the Simpsons and SportsCenter.

Yes, I wallow in visual entertainment poverty. But even if I can't obtain my present television needs, I want my kids to have all the advantages I had when I was their age.

So when it comes to cable, boycott it, buy it, borrow it or steal it.

Just don't pay for it. Because it's time to take back the airwaves.

"So I bought a .44 magnum it was solid steel cast.

And in the blessed name of Elvis well I just let it blast. 'Til my TV lay in pieces there at my feet. And they busted me for disturbin' the almighty peace."

— Springsteen

EDITORIAL

There is no place in elections for automatic endorsements

The Issue: The automatic endorsement of Brent Petersen as a City Council candidate in the polySCOPE caucus before voting by student clubs actually began. The endorsement idea was presented to an undisclosed number of student organizations on campus. The organizations were informed they must endorse Petersen and then choose one other candidate for the two open council seats.

The Decision: Cal Poly students should be able to endorse candidates freely, with no limitations, restrictions or recommendations.

Like the feelings created by fingernails on a chalkboard, a chill should rise in the spine of any American who has a vote forced upon them.

So when polySCOPE approached campus clubs with the idea of a mandatory endorsement of the only Cal Poly candidate, it is surprising that a great deal of protest did not erupt.

The implementation of a mandatory vote was a serious mistake.

This isn't a shot on Brent Petersen. In fact, he's the victim. It is probable that his qualifications would have garnered him a strong endorsement on his own. He should have had the opportunity to achieve this in a valid forum.

Petersen is a talented candidate who deserves to be endorsed by a fair process. The automatic endorsement discredits him, polySCOPE and the school as a whole.

Petersen has said himself that, if elected, he would be a city representative first and a student second. There is no basis for him to be separated from the other candidates in any forum.

PolySCOPE's decision may have been well-intentioned in concept, but was hideous diatribe in practice.

Controlling a candidate and telling people who to vote for may be acceptable in some Third World countries, but these practices are nothing but dangerous on a college campus.

Getting a great deal of students involved in a school endorsement is a noble idea. The whole process, however, is tainted as soon as any restriction is applied.

Fortunately, an endorsement is only a recommendation and has limited impact on the real thing. Hopefully, we will all be redeemed by a huge turnout today.

So get out and vote.

And this time, hopefully, nobody will tell you how to do it.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Reader says Daily 'inflammatory'

As a reader of Mustang Daily for close to a third of a century, I resent spending time reading inflammatory articles like Hamilton's: "CSU asks for more money...." Particularly the first paragraph — those words most often read.

I think that anxiety levels are sufficiently high among students without words like "Hand from its students' pockets," and "fumble through the wallets of taxpayers."

Charles Quinlan

Mustang Daily Policies

Commentaries and reporter's notebooks are the opinions of the author and do not necessarily reflect the viewpoints of Mustang Daily. Unsigned editorials represent the majority opinion of the editorial staff.

Letters to the editor should be typed, less than 250 words, and should include the author's name, phone number and major or occupation. Because of space limitations, shorter letters have a better chance of appearing in Mustang Daily.

Commentaries should be between two and three pages (between 800 and 1,000 words), double-spaced, and turned in to the opinion editor's box at Mustang Daily. Commentaries are welcome from students, faculty and members of the community. Mustang Daily's opinion staff reserves the right to edit letters and commentaries for length, accuracy and clarity. Submissions to the opinion page or inquiries about Mustang Daily can be made at the Mustang Daily office, Graphic Arts room 226.

THE SOLUTION

THE PROBLEMS we face today both at the social and individual level are truly awesome: At the national and international level the issues are human rights, poverty, and war. At the individual level, people are searching for identity, self-worth, acceptance, and love. We believe the solution to all these problems is Jesus Christ. And we are available to talk to students and colleagues about the Solution.
